EVELYN THAW'S OWN STORY ON WITNESS STAND

"CONFESSION"
Posed by
EVELYN NESBIT THAW

The beauty that lured Stanford White to tragic death and Harry Thaw to the murderer's dock. Will it be as potent to save the slayer a it was to inspire him to jealous frenzy?

Wife of Harry Thaw in Court Tells of His Proposal to Her in Paris, of Her Refusal, Because of Her Previous Relations with Stanford White, and of the Tragedy That Was the Culmination of the Rivalry Between the Two Men.

BY BOSTON AMERICAN LEASED WIRE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw bared her heart's history to the world to-day to save the life of her husband.

The beautiful young wife of Harry K. Thaw, on the witness stand in the trial of her husband for the slaying of Stanford White, told the most amazing, the most dramatic and the most pathetic story ever heard in a court room.

In a voice that at times trembled with excitement and again teemed with the intensity of her emotion, the slender girl recalled the facts of the "death dinner" at Cafe Martin, where she wrote the fatal note about Stanford White and gave it to her husband.

From here she went, with her party, to the roof garden where the shooting took place. Her face paled as with death as she told how the shots that rang the death knell of the architect smote her ears.

Tears welled in her big blue eyes when Lawyer Delmas led her gently to the love story of her life—the courtship of Harry Thaw, his proposal and her refusal to marry him.

Stanford White was the reason. The little girl trembled as she reached this point of her tragic history. Absolute silence was in the courtroom. Her voice was low but distinct. There was feeling in every word she uttered.

Appealed to All in Court.

Dressed in the same blue costume she has worn since the trial began, Evelyn Thaw was a picture that appealed to every man and woman in the court room. In dress that had nothing of the show girl in it, in manner that contained no hint of the footlights, in humility of look and tone and gesture, the little former show girl atoned.

It was June and it was in Paris that Harry Thaw asked Evelyn Thaw to be his wife, and it was there that she told him her life's history—a recital that was to make him a maddened animal whose hatred could only be appeased when he held a smoking pistol over the cooling body of Stanford White.

"I Cried, and Told Him All."

"Harry came to me in Paris," said Evelyn Thaw to-day in the court room, and told me that he loved me and wanted me to marry him. I stared at him and he asked: "Don't you care for me?" 'Yes,' I replied, and then he asked me the reason for my refusal.

"He put his hand on my shoulder and asked: 'Is it because of Stanford White?' I told him, 'Yes,' and he sat down. Harry told me that he would be my friend for life, that he could never love anybody else, and would marry me and no one else.

"I cried, and then Harry asked me to tell him the whole affair."

Just as she had told the story to her sweetheart in Paris of her acquaintance with White, Evelyn Thaw retold it to the judge and jury—and to the public. She said that a chorus girl, Edna Goodrich, in August, 1901, asked her to a luncheon party where she would meet Stanford White. The young wife said her mother consented and with her friend she took a cab and went to a studio on West Twenty-fourth street. The witness said the doors seemed to open of themselves.

"We went upstairs," said Evelyn, "and there I met a man who was introduced to me as Stanford White. I thought him an ugly man. There was a table already set for four. Another gentleman came later. I remember Mr. White teased me about my hair, which I wore down my back, and my short skirt, which reached to my shoe tops.

Told Mother All About It.

"After supper we went up two flights of stairs more, and in the room was a large red velvet swing. Mr. White put me in the swing and swung me very hard. When we swung very hard one foot crashed through a large Japanese umbrella which hung from the ceiling."

District Attorney Jerome objected to this line of testimony, but was overruled. Evelyn continued her testimony, saying that after swinging Mr. White suggested a ride in the park.

"The young lady and went to a dentist after leaving Mr. White's studio," said Evelyn, "and then I went home and told my mother all about the visit.

"Later I received a note inviting me to a party. I was told in the note that a carriage would be waiting to take me to my destination. On the night in question I got into the carriage and was driven to the Madison Square Garden, where Mr. White had a studio in the tower. There were two other persons there.

"Mr. White said at the party that I was not to have more than one glass of champagne and must be taken home early to my mama. He took me home that night to the door of our apartment."

Q.—You saw Stanford White when you stood there? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long after did you see Mr. Thaw? A.—A minute after.

Q.—Will you kindly state the conversation that passed between you and your husband at that time?

Q.—Did you state the reasons? A.—I did.

Q.—Were those reasons connected with anything in your life with which Mr. White was connected?

Objection by Mr. Jerome was sustained by the court.

Q.—What effect did those reasons have upon him?

Question objected to and sustained by the court.

Q.—In stating the reasons to Mr. Thaw why you refused his offer of marriage, did you state a reason which was based upon any event with which Mr. Stanford White was connected?

Objected to by Mr. Jerome, but it was overruled.

"Yes."

"Tell Us the Whole Story."

"Will you kindly give us the whole of that conversation from beginning to end? A.—Mr. Thaw was sitting with me. He said he loved me and wanted to marry me, and he added: 'Don't you care for me?' I said 'Yes.' He said: 'Then why don't you marry me?' He said again, 'Why don't you marry me?' I said, 'I won't.' He said, 'But why?'

"He put his hands on my shoulders and he said, 'It is because of Stanford White,' and I said, 'Yes, it is because of Stanford White.'"

Q.—What was his manner? A.—He was very kind and gentle.

Q.—What else did he say? A.—He said, "Why don't you marry me, dear?" I said, "I cannot." He said, "You will never marry anyone else" if I did not marry him. Then he asked me to tell him why I would not marry him, and I cried and told him. He wanted me to tell him more fully, and he told me again he wanted to marry me.

LURED TO WHITE'S ROOM IN THE TOWER

"I began telling him where and when I first met Stanford White. I told him a girl had invited me to a dinner party with some friends and I said I would have to see my mother. This girl came again, and this time she talked to my mother about going to this dinner. The friend called again and asked me to go to dinner with her. My mother consented. This same young lady came for me in a hansom cab. My mother dressed me and I got into a cab and went to the Waldorf. From the Waldorf we went to Thirty-eighth street and then to Twenty-fourth street. The young lady got out of the hansom cab and asked me to follow her."

Q.—It has been suggested by the District Attorney that you fix the time of this occurence. A.—I think it was in August, 1901.

Q.—You were then sixteen years and some months old, and your mother dressed you? A.—Yes.

Q.—Now, proceed with the narrative of what you said to Mr. Thaw.

"Saw Later It Was White."

"I told him we went up some stairs and got into an elevator. I stopped and asked the young lady where we were going and she said it was all right.

Q.—You heard a voice? A.—Yes, it said, 'Hello.' I did not then see, but I saw later that the man was Stanford White.

Q.—There was another gentleman there with you? A.—Yes. I sat at a table and I remember my hair was down my back and I wore short dresses.

Q.—You still wore short dresses? A.—Yes, not very short, though—about to my shoe tops.

Q.—Now proceed. A.—Well, we had lunch. Then we went up two flights of stairs to another room, where there was a red velvet swing up to the ceiling. They had an umbrella near the ceiling and when we swung high enough our feet would go to it

In reply to an objection by Jerome, Delmas said:

"If the learned District Attorney desires to probe into the correctness of our story he is at perfect liberty to do so. Now proceed, Mrs. Thaw, with your story, please."

"Then after a while," said the young wife, "Mr. White said he would have to go back to his office, much as he would like to stay all day. After a few moments he came back, and the young lady said she would have to go to a dentist. Then the young lady and myself went downstairs and got into an electric hansom and drove around the park.

Told Mother About It.

Q.—Did you tell your mother about this occurrence? A.—I did.

Q.—Did you receive a letter? A.—My mother received a letter from Mr. White asking her to call.

Q.—What did you say to Mr. Thaw about a letter sent to you by Mr. White? A.—I told him everything. Mr. Thaw asked me to tell him everything and I did so.

Objection by Mr. Jerome on this line of questioning was sustained by the court. Mrs. Thaw continued:

"Mr. Thaw asked me what was in the letter. I told him Mr. White had written my mother requesting her to call to see him. I told him Mr. White not only wanted me to go to the dentist, but wanted my mother to go, too. Then the next time I saw Mr. White was at another luncheon in his studio.

"I told Mr. Thaw how I came to go to the place, and how I was invited. I also told him about the second luncheon in the Twenty-fourth street studio. I told him before that Mr. White had sent me a hat, a long gray boa and a coat. My mother made me a new dress, which I put on and with the cape and the new hat on I went out. When I got as far as Park & Tilford's Stanford White stepped out. We got in a carriage and came to the Madison Square Garden and went up into the tower. There was another young lady there and another man.

In Stanford White's Tower.

"He asked me how I liked his apartment, and I said: 'Very nicely, Mr. White.'"

Q.—Did you tell Thaw to what part of the Madison Square Garden you went? A.—Yes, I told Mr. Thaw I went to the apartment of Mr. White in the Madison Square tower.

Q.—Did you describe the apartment? A.—No; Mr. Thaw told me he had been there.

Q.—Proceed. A.—I told him we had a very nice time and that Mr. White had said: "A little girl like me was not to have more than one glass of champagne."

Q.—At what time of night was this? A.—About 1:30 o'clock in the morning.

Q.—Were the same persons present—that is, Mr. White, the same young lady and the same young gentleman whose name you are not to mention? A.—Yes, the same persons were present.

"SAY, YOU FELLOWS,

Shouts Laborer (Arrested) to Jury,

CLEAR HARRY THAW"

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—While the Thaw jury was on the way from the Broadway Central Hotel to the Criminal Courts building to-day, one of a crowd of snow shovellers shouted to them: "Say, you fellows ought to acquit Harry K. Thaw."

Captain Lynch, in charge of the jury, became greatly excited, and yelled loudly to a policeman a half block down the street: "Come up here and arrest that man."

The officer did so and followed the jury with his prisoner to the criminal branch of the Supreme Court. There Captain Lynch placed the offending snow shoveller under guard with the intention of arraigning him him for contempt when Justice Fitzgerald arrived.

Technically it was said such an act as that of the offender would disqualify a whole jury, but the law records mention of no case in which such a thing has been done. It was considered probable, however, that the guard of the jury would have to be increased and all persons kept at a distance.

NEWS AGENTS' SHOW A HIT

That the first minstrel show given by the Mutual Relief and Benefit Association of the Hotel & Railroad News Company employes is such a success that others are bound to follow is the opinion to-day of the hundreds of persons who crowded the Dudley Street Opera House last night at the initial performance

"Wardie" Watson and his company, every one of them members of the association, handed out a real, live entertainment, one of the kind that delights, for it was chock full of new things, new fun, new jokes and new methods. The minstrel first part was just right. "Wardie" was given the hand every time he opened his mouth. End Men Ernest Drew and "Cliff" Rogers kept up the fun, never allowing it to lag.

"Jimmie" Hogan and Bert Spears made good on their first rounds, and whenever they did anything afterward they got laughs long and loud from the audience. In the olio Goodrich and Drew, banjo and character artists, called forth rounds of applause. "Ferg" and "Bill" Given and Patrick Sullivan had nothing to be ashamed of in their stunts, for they were as good as the best.

The performance is to be repeated tonight.

KILL WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE.

GUTHRIE, Okla., Feb. 7.—Woman's suffrage was killed yesterday in the constitutional convention in session here.

NUN TESTIFIES IN TRIAL OF J. O. HIGGINS

Sister Mary Madeline, a nun from Fitchburg, shrinking with timidity and from nervousness due to her unusual surroundings, was a witness to-day in the trial of Attorney James Oliver Higgins of Boston, charged with perjury and subornation of perjury in connection with the will of Mrs. Hannah E. Boyle of Chelsea.

In the Superior Criminal Court, before Judge Gaskill, the black clad sister walked to the witness stand. She testified that on the day of the funeral of Hannah Boyle she saw a will in blank with the name of "Hannah E. Boyle" signed at the bottom in the possession of Matthew P. Callanan, and at the same time Callanan had in his possession a blank deed signed by "Hannah Boyle" and also an order in blank for a savings' bank book in Fitchburg.

The will, deed and order were presented as evidence in court to-day, all filled out, and Sister Madeline identified them as the same ones Callanan had in his possession on the day of the funeral. Sister Mary declared she was positive in her identification because of the strangeness of the signature which she noticed on the day of the funeral and because of the rough edge of the paper upon which it was written.

Nurse Contradicts Higgins.

Miss Louise T. Herrick, who nursed Mrs. Boyle in her last illness, flatly contradicted the testimony of Attorney Higgins that he had been at Mrs. Boyle's home on February 4, 1905.

Miss Herrick was the first witness today. She is a trained nurse. She declared that on Saturday, February 4, 1905, neither Attorney Higgins nor Peter J. Callanan had been at the Boyle house, No. 7 Half Moon street, Chelsea. This contradicts the testimony of the attorney given in the Probate Court on May 16, 1905, when he deposed that he drew up the will of Mrs. Hannah E. Boyle at her home on that night.

Miss Herrick estified that Mrs. Boyle was delirious from 11 o'clock Monday morning, Feb. 6, 1905, until she died that night at 9:40. She said that Mrs. Boyle was raving, clutching at the bed clothes and calling affectionately for her eleven-year-old daughter, Katie. At 5:30 in the evening that day she said Attorney Higgins, with Matthew Callanan, called at the house and went to Mrs. Boyle's room despite her condition and stayed there for three-quarters of an hour. Miss Herrick sat in an adjoining room the while.

Patient Was Delirious.

She testified that when they left, Mrs. Boyle was still delirious, that she was propped up in her bed, and that three gas jets were burning full. The nurse swears that neither Peter J. Callanan nor Ellen Connors, who are on the disputed will as witnesses, were in the room, and she says that Callanan was not in the house that night until after Mrs. Boyle had died.

Miss Herrick swears that she heard Attorney Higgins when he came to the house that night declare that he hadn't seen Mrs. Boyl for three weeks before, and that then she was in his office.

FLAMES DRIVE WOMEN IN PANIC FROM HOTEL

CLAD IN NIGHT CLOTHES, ACTRESSES FLEE, SHIVERING IN SHARP MORNING AIR.

Special to the Boston American.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Feb. 7.—One hundred guests and empolyes at the Hotel Kendall are suffering to-day from the effects of shock and exposure, caused by being driven from the building in their night clothes by a fire which at one time threatened the entire structure. The women of the "Alice-Sit-by-the-Fire" company, headed by Mary Shaw, were driven to the freezing cold of the street.

The women and little children, guests of the house, were badly chilled by going out into the fresing cold in such scanty garb. They were cared for temporarily until the fire was put out. Then they were able to return to their apartments.

Night Clerk Stearns first noticed smoke at about 2 o'clock. He called the fire department by telephone and then rushed through the halls shouting "Fire! Fire!"

The blaze made such rapid headway that the halls were quickly filled with smoke, and the frightened guests, wakened from a sound sleep, groped their way to the street with difficulty.

Two small children were in the hotel and were carried out by their mothers. The scene was one of wild panic, but all the guests with one exception reached the street.

Mrs. Grace Temple of South Framingham, who lives at the hotel, overcome by fright, rushed to the hotel office. She refused to leave the building. She ran about the office in a dazed condition and was quited with great difficulty after the blaze had been extinguished.

Not one of those who left the hotel had a garment other than night clothes. The suffering of the guests from cold was intense until stores in the Amsterdam block and adjourning building were thrown open to receive them.

The fire caught in the basement of the hotel from some unknown cause. It created a great smoke and had gained good headway when the firemen arrived. It was under control in half an hour.

The basement was burned out but the rest of the hotel was not damaged, except by smoke. As soon as the fire was out the guests returned to their rooms.

The Kendall is a new hotel and the largest in the town. It is located on Main street in the business centre of the town, and directly connected with the New Amsterdam block. It is a four-story brick affair and modern in every particular. At the time of the fire nearly every room in the hotel held its full quota of guests, many of them being traveling men and others who had been delayed in town by the storm.

There are several apartments in the hotel which are occupied by families, but there were few children. Everybody in the house was asleep, but the clerk, when the fire caught.

3 DEAD, MANY FATALLY HURT, IN TRAIN WRECK

CHICAGO, Feb. 7.—Three men were killed and a number fatally injured to-day when a Chicago Great Western fast train ran through an open switch near Germanville, Ill. The men killed were the engineer, fireman and baggage agent. The engine and baggage coach, which was next to it, were almost completely demolished.

The train was moving at the rate of fifty miles an hour.

BURRAGES LOSE POINT IN SUIT

Judge Rugg in the Supreme Court to-day denied the motion of Albert C. and Charles D. Burrage for an open jury trial in the suit brought against them by Paine, Webber & Co., to recover 70,000 shares of Copper Range consolidated or their value. This is the suit in which Thomas W. Lawson is one of the defendants.

It is charged by the plaintiffs that the stock was disposed of in violation of contract made with the Paine, Webber concern on August 25, 1903. The Burrages wanted a trial by jury, but this Judge Rugg refuses to grant in the opinion handed down to-day.

STEAMSHIP KING'S WIDOW TO WED AGAIN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Herman Oelrichs and Harry Black are to be married. This report has gained credence among friends of the widow of the steamship king. Decorum forbids a public announcement of the betrothal for several months, but the understanding is that their wedding will be after the expiration of Mrs. Oelrichs's year of widowhood.

Mr. Black is not a society man. The first Mrs. Black was a Miss Fuller. They were divorced and she was married again to Tyler Morse of Boston.

JEROME FINDS DELMAS A FOEMAN WORTHY OF HIS STEEL

Delmas Has Among Other Legal Virtues the Great One of Knowing When Enough Has Been Said—Hawthorne

Turns Tables on District Attorney by Complete Mastery of the Case. Defence Scores Repeatedly by Craft of Californian.

BY

Julian Hawthorne

DISTRICT ATTORNEY JEROME, at the opening of the session yesterday, introduced quotations from books of record, intended to undermine the defence on its hereditary insanity plea.

Mr. Delmas watched his proceedings on the part of the defence and evidenced in his comments, objections and statements, a mastery of the matter under discussion so complete—he seemed to understand so well what Jerome was trying to do, and what the upshot of his efforts would be—that the wind was taken in some degree out of the district attorney's sails.

He withdrew "at this particular and in this particular form" one issue after another that Jerome had proposed to raise. After a few minutes of very polite sparring between the two gentlemen, a Mr. Boman was called to the witness stand to tell how Stanford White, in 1903, had threatened the life of Harry Thaw.

Jerome objected provisionally to Mr. Delmas's question on the ground that such a matter had not been comprised under what he had understood to be the plan of defence.

Witness Declares White Threatened to Shoot Thaw.

The objection was not sustained and the witness told how White had come to the stage door of a theatre in which Evelyn Nesbit was acting, had asked after her, and had then (after being told that she had gone away with Thaw) exclaimed, his [illegible] black with anger, that he would kill ——— ——— (Thaw) before morning, at the same time showing a revolver in his overcoat pocket.

This testimony, naturally, produced a deep impression upon the audience, and under the treatment of Mr. Delmas was given its full effect.

It opened up a new chapter in the defence in a dashing and almost sensational manner.

Mr. Jerome rose to cross-examine, apparently a little in doubt as to how he should proceed. While he was thinking this out he plied the witness with questions as to his past history. The witness' career had not been especially distinguished or important—He was a skilled mechanic—and Mr. Jerome took care that it should not appear any more distinguished than it was. He dwelt upon the amount of salary the witness had received at various times; and the moderate figures named indicated that Jerome's purpose was to make this chronic lack of cash on the witness' part the basis for suggestions as to possible motive for the production of his present testimony.

Received No Compensation for His Testimony.

The dry and quiet sarcasm of Jerome's manner and tone at this period were admirable from the histrionic point of view; and he constantly paced to and fro in front of the witness with his hands in his pockets. He traced Mr. Boman from one spell of hard times to another, until he brought him to the neighborhod of the Thaw tragedy.

At this time the witness's punctuality of recollection began to suffer some diminution. Jerome became more and more polite, to give effect to the attack for which he was laying the foundation. Meanwhile Mr. Delmas listened with attention and occasionally requested Mr. Jerome, very weakly, to move away from between him and the witness.

Finally the question was put: "Did you receive any compensation for the testimony you offered here to-day?"

"I did not."

"When did the incident you described occur?"

"To the best of my recollection on Christmas eve, 1903."

"What hour did Evelyn Nesbit leave the theatre?"

"About 11."

"At what hour did White come there?"

"About a quarter after 11."

"When did you tell Mr. Thaw about this?"

Was Alone in Theatre When White Came.

"Four or five days afterward."

"Where did you meet him?"

"On Fifth avenue, about 5 o'clock, near Twenty-eighth street."

"What was the weather?"

"There was snow on the ground, but the evening was clear."

The witness was then taken back to the dialogue with White at the stage entrance. No one except himself was in the theatre at the time. White, after searching in vain for Evelyn Nesbit, returned with his hand in his pocket, and, as he passed the witness showed his revolver and muttered to himself, though he did not speak to the witness, "I'll kill that ——— ——— before daylight!"

And so speaking, he opened the stage door, got into a hansom and was driven away.

The witness told this part of the story very glibly, and, standing up, acted out the doings of White. Mr. Jerome contrived to make the incident seem rather singular, but the witness stuck to his tale, and escaped several traps into which Jerome tried to lead him.

"How did you first tell this story to the lawyer for the defence?"

"I wrote them a letter."

"Have you the letter?" demanded Jerome, turning on Thaw's counsel.

Jerome the Sufferer in Tilts with Delmas.

"I have it," replied Mr. O'Reilly, smiling broadly.

"When did you make the affidavit?"

"About 2 or 3 o'clock last Saturday?"

"Who came for you?"

"No one; I was invited by letter."

"Where is that letter?"

"I destroyed it; I destroy all my letters."

"How many days off did you take from your work in consequence of this matter?"

"About two days."

Mr. Jerome's purpose was evidently to make the witness admit that he had other means of support than the pay of his regular work. But the witness was warily on his guard. The audience hung anxiously upon the duel. But at this point Mr. Jerome suddenly sat down.

Mr. Delmas' re-direct was very entertaining. He had had three or four little tilts with Mr. Jerome before he had been up five minutes, in each of which Mr. Jerome was the sufferer; the tenor of Delmas' interrogations was, of course, to repair any rents in the witness's armor which Jerome had seemed to make.

Has Virtue of Knowing When Enough Has Been Said.

It was obvious that Jerome stood in great fear of the distinguished counsel from California, and he never missed an effort to check him; but the judge uniformly overruled him. Delmas has among other legal virtues the great one of knowing when enough has been done or said, and he is never misled into mistaking a subordinate point for a capital one.

A Mr. Howard was the next witness to tell of a conversation with White in June, 1903. In this conversation (strongly objected by Jerome) Thaw's name was mentioned. But the tale did not get much further than this for the time being, because Jerome called the person whom the witness had been told was White a "mysterious personage," and Delmas postponed the examination until an identification could be made.

During the testimony of White, the next witness, who was present on the night of the shooting, a dispute arose as to the propriety of a question concerning the witness's opinion of Thaw's sanity or insanity.

Jerome objected, and Delmas thereupon quoted a precisely similar question permitted by the Court of Appeals. The Judge read over the passage, and remarked that the question involved a legal view which the court had afterward abandoned. The matter was so knotty that the Judge said he would rule upon it after recess.

Delmas has made an excellent impression on audience and jury, and has much improved the situation of the defence.

SKETCHED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY GRACE HYMAN.

BY

Dorothy Dix

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—With Gleason deposed and Delmas in the saddle the defence of Harry Thaw took on a new color yesterday. It was the first time that the famous California lawyer has had an opportunity to show his quality, and he most emphatically made good. He is keen, shrewd, strategic, suave, diplomatic, and with as pretty a wit as needs be. Never once did Mr. Jerome catch him napping, and in the very first passage-at-arms between himself and the District Attorney he drew blood. Mr. Jerome had twitted him with being unfamiliar with the New York statutes, and with a smile of beaming and childlike graciousness the Westerner replied:

The first witness called projected into the case the elements of romantic interest—stage doors and dressing rooms, automobiles and cabs, and chorus girls and "Johnnies"—that have been so eagerly looked forward to by the curious throngs that try in vain to break into the courtroom, as affording, at last, a real glimpse of the inner life of the Great White Way. The man who did this was a dark, bullet-headed gentleman by the name of Boman, who had served as doorkeeper at the Madison Square Theatre on Twenty-fourth street, and in his official capacity knew both White and Thaw.

Mr. Boman testified most positively that White had threatened the life of Thaw in his presence. He said that on Christmas eve, 1903, about 11 o'clock, Thaw went to the theatre in his automobile for Miss Nesbit, who came out in a few minutes and whirled away with Mr. Thaw.

Some ten minutes later Stanford White also drove up and demanded Miss Nesbit. The doorkeeper replied that she had gone. Mr. White's oaths, as reported by Mr. Boman, were of so tremendous a character that the judge interrupted the session long enough to give any woman present, who might be getting squeamish about the evidence, a chance to leave the room.

Escape Recital of Oaths.

The Countess of Yarmouth and Mrs. Carnegie availed themselves of the privilege, as did three other women, but apparently the balance of the feminine portion of the audience had come to have their hair raised and were determined to get their moneys' worth. Nothing that could shock the most sensitive, however, transpired after this, and in a little while the Countess and Mrs. Carnegie slipped back to into their old seats.

The other interesting witness was Thomas McCaleb, the young man who, with Truxton Beale and Evelyn, dined with Thaw on the night of the tragedy, and accompanied him to the Madison Square Garden roof. McCaleb is a rather good looking young man of just the same age as the prisoner—thirty-six. He is tall, slender and fair, with smooth, light brown hair parted in the middle, prominent blue eyes, a big nose and a pleasant mouth. He expresses himself in excellently chosen words—rather select words, if you will excuse the expression. He was so keenly anxious to tell what he had to tell, and so desirous of helping his friends out of their trouble, that he answered questions before they were out of his interrogator's mouth, and after the judge ruled the answers out, in a way that provoked the District Attorney into characterizing his conduct as "indecent."

Hereditary insanity is the defence that is being built up for Thaw, and every time it is mentioned he shudders. For he knows that it is a two-edged sword that may slay him, even while it saves him from the chair.

WAS WITH THAWS NIGHT OF TRAGEDY; TELLS HIS STORY

Thomas McCaleb, who was on Madison Square Garden roof at the time of the tragedy, was an important witness.

Mr. McCaleb was questioned by Delmas.

Q.—Do you know Harry K. Thaw? A.—I do.

Q.—Did you meet him on the evening of June 25? A.—Yes.

Q.—You had seats for the performance at the Madison Square Roof? A.—We took seats.

"My God, He Has Shot Him."

Q.—How long did you remain there? A.—I do not remember the hour.

Q.—Was the play still in progress? A.—Yes it was in the second act.

Q.—How did you happen to leave before the play was over? A.—Mrs. Thaw arose and we started to the elevator. When we had almost reached the arch we were abreast. I had just heard three rapid pistol shots. I stopped and heard Mrs. Thaw, who had already turned around, say: "My God, he has shot him."

"There she stood, pale and trembling. The next thing I saw was Thaw with the pistol in his hand, holding it up in the air.

Q.—Where was he at the time? A.—He was at a little distance from his wife. He approached and she screamed: "Oh, my God, Harry, why have you done it?" He replied, "I have saved your life," and then he kissed her.

Q.—What was done then? A.—Mr. Beale, who was there, came up, and I said to him, "He has killed a man." I did not know who it was. Together with him and Mrs. Thaw and the man who arrested him we went down in the elevator. He made other remarks which I couldn't understand because of the excitement. He was turned over to a policeman. He said something about telephoning to Carnegie.

Q.—George Carnegie? A.—I don't know—just Carnegie.

Q.—From what you saw and what you heard the defendant say, at that time in your opinion was he rational or irrational? A.—Irrational.

Q.—Before going to the Garden you had been with the party where? A.—At the Cafe Martin.

Q.—From there you went to the roof garden? A.—Yes.

Q.—At what time? A.—About twenty minutes to 8 o'clock.

Q.—Where were you seated at the cafe? A.—Our table was about midway between the Fifth avenue window and the Twenty-sixth street side.

Q.—On the Fifth avenue side were there a balcony with flowers and shrubbery and patrons there? A.—Yes, I think there were.

Q.—Did you notice any communication between Mr. Thaw and his wife at the table? A.—I heard Mrs. Thaw ask for a pencil from her husband.

Q.—You saw him hand her a piece of paper later? A.—Yes, I did.

Demands Note of Jerome.

Q.—Did Mr. Thaw make any remark? A.—No.

Q.—Did the note have any effect on his appearance?

Objection, sustained.

Mr. Jerome said nothing and remained quietly seated with his back turned toward Mr. Delmas.

Mr. Delmas said: "I now call upon the learned District Attorney to produce the paper, if it is in his possession."

"There being no response," said Mr. Delmas, "I take it that the learned District Attorney's silence is not due to discourtesy, but to a misconception of the duties of his office, and I shall now proceed to prove the existence of that note in another way."

Cross-examined by Mr. Jerome.

Q.—When you say in your opinion that Mr. Thaw was irrational do you refer to his mental state or to his appearance? A.—I meant his appearance, his looks. It was so pronounced—

"Now wait a minute," called the district attorney.

"We have talked this over before. Listen to my questions." Then like a flash Mr. Jerome snapped out: "Did this man owe you any money?"

"No."

"Did you ever try to borrow any money from him?"

"Never."

On redirect examination Mr. McCaleb was asked when he had first met the district attorney. A.—Some months ago at the Union Club.

Q.—Did you ever make a statement to him or his assistants. A.—I made a deposition.

When Mr. Jerome took up the recross-examination he introduced as people's exhibit No. 5 a document, and asked Mr. McCaleb if it was the deposition he had referred to. Mr. McCaleb read it, then said that it was the paper he had signed.

Mr. Jerome offered the document in evidence, but it was withdrawn when Mr. Delmas objected. Mr. Delmas then asked Mr. McCaleb: "When you had a talk with the District Attorney at the Union Club a few days after the shooting, did you tell him that you thought Mr. Thaw was irrational?"

Mr. Jerome objected, and his objection was sustained. Mr. McCaleb's lips moved. Mr. Jerome sprang to his feet. "What do you mean by answering that question after the court has ruled it out? I call the attention of the court to this literary man who comes here and acts in this manner. It is positively indecent."

Mr. Delmas protested that the witness had the misfortune to have to testify in the case, but was entitled to courtesy all the same. "He is," remarked Justice Fitzgerald, who, however, admonished the witness not to answer questions in the future until the Court had ruled on them.

"You say you had a conversation with me at the Union Club?" shouted Mr. Jerome at the witness with a tone of anger still in his voice. "What time of night was it?"

"I don't recall."

Q.—Was it late in the evening? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many drinks had you had? A.—I had one with you.

The courtroom was in an uproar of laughter and the attendants had to rap for order.

"How many drinks had you had before you reached the one with me?" resumed Mr. Jerome. The witness could not recall.

Mr. Delmas objected to a further examination along this line, and when he had been sustained by the court, he himself asked the witness: "What did the learned District Attorney drink with you?"

"The same that I did."

Alfred Henry Lewis

WHEN evidence taking began, Mr. Gleason, as commander-in-chief, rode in the van of the Thaw defence. Yesterday Mr. Delmas occupied that position, Mr. Gleason having been relegated to the rear.

Mr. Delmas held the place greater to Thaw's advantage than had Mr. Gleason. Mr. Delmas is cool, quick, trenchant—a perilous adversary. He can do anything with the rules of evidence that a Frenchman does with foils. Foot and eye and wrist, he is a finished fencer, and thrusts or parries with equal swiftness and address. Mr. Gleason, uncertain, weak in guard and slovenly in assault—a yokel with a club would have performed as brilliantly.

And yet one is not to decide too harshly concerning Mr. Gleason. I should say now that his forte is with books and that he comes to the trial table only to disparage himself. A man may know the law like a Marshall or a Kent and still fail forensically. On the other hand, he may shine at question asking and that word-sparring which belongs with the inevitable detail of every litigation, and yet know no more law than does necessity herself.

Gleason Error Was Due To Thaw Himself.

No one should say that Mr. Gleason is a poor lawyer because he has shown himself to be weak as an advocate. Mr. Gleason in the trial van was misplaced. That error has been corrected and hereafter he will serve the Thaw interests excellently from the rear.

"But," say you, "why should Mr. Gleason allow himself to be betrayed into taking the lead?"

Mr. Gleason is so much like the rest of us that he possess no great knowledge of himself. It takes a big man to know how small he is, and Mr. Gleason was not born under that caption.

That Gleason's error was due to Thaw himself. He insisted on playing his usual role of Spoiled Child, and demanded Mr. Gleason. Not that I blame Thaw for following off the wrong wagon track in this. Thaw is but the victim of circumstances.

The most difficult destiny in its working out is the destiny that finds its source in a cradleful of gold. It means a lack of that driving need required to develop and strengthen a man morally, mentally, physically. Man's growth depends upon collision, battle, work. To bring him any full expression of the possible he must be opposed, withstood, contended against. What athlete would not dwindle and spindle into muscular nothingness if he were guilty of naught more energy than just lying in bed?

Nature Gives Brains Only Where Needed.

Nature throws nothing away; she is no squandering spendthrift to foster waste. She will maintain a great standing army of brains and courage and mental resolution in favor of no man unless they be required by the daily method of his life. Also it is the storms that make the sailors. If everybody's voyage of life meant only a smooth sea, a smiling sky and gentle, flutterings winds; if there were no such wrecking commodities as head seas and swooping hurricanes, we would all be cabin boys and never the likeness of a full-fledged

And that was the weakening disaster in the instance of Thaw. He had gold, but no work. Wherefore he is bad as a weigher of events and worse as a judge of men. Thus he picked Mr. Gleason to "lead" when of all about him that gentleman of stiff and narrow angularities was least fitted for the work.

However, all's well that ends well—at any rate, it's no sin to hope so, and Thaw's prospects under a Delmas management recovered that color of health which they had lost through the Gleason blunderings.

The first to feel the change was Mr. Jerome. He had been having an outing with Mr. Gleason. Against Mr. Delmas he found that he must work.

There is one setback from which the Thaw interest suffers and never a chance of relief. That is the cloud of counsel he has retained. There is room at a trial table for two lawyers, no more. Three make an instance of "too many cooks" and the broth is sure of being spoiled. What then should be the brothy outlook when six and seven cooks begin to crowd the kitchen?

Just the Right Number of Lawyers for State.

This makes one of the reasons why Mr. Jerome and Mr. Garvan appeared to such brilliant advantage. They are not too many; they number just enough. Let me add, too, that Mr. Jerome as an advocate is better than his reputation. Justice has not been done the District Attorney in that regard. Folk have fallen into the habit, perhaps by his own fault, of condemning him not so much for his attainments as a lawyer as his dexterity as a politician. Having in off-and-on fashion watched him for ten days, I should call Mr. Jerome the trial-table equal of Mr. Delmas, and that I opine to be the last limit of compliment. Likewise, for his own good reputation, to say naught of the welfare of the public at large, I would suggest that he appear oftener in the conduct of cases and leave less of such work for his assistants.

Great was the fall of Expert Wiley—Wiley of Pittsburg. The cross-examination of Mr. Jerome turned him inside out like a glove. Expert Wiley came to swear that Thaw was crazy, and before he escaped from the witness stand he was nearly crazy himself.

The popular feeling goes for it that Expert Wiley proved himself a dullard.

One should remember that in a tilt between counsel and witness the advantage of position rests always with the former. It is easier to ask than to answer a question, and therein Mr. Jerome from the outset with the expert held the high ground.

Jerome Thoroughly Prepared Technically.

Neither should Mr. Jerome's technical knowledge astonish one. He knew what the drift of the defence events would be and prepared himself. In the months allowed for preparation, Mr. Jerome has read many books, and when Expert Wiley took the stand Mr. Jerome was quite his equal as an "expert." Besides, Mr. Jerome has not read his Plato for fun, and is a past master at question asking.

It is no marvel that Mr. Jerome floored the scientist from Pittsburg. As intimated in a former article, this trade of "alienist" has nothing in nature on which to base itself. It is exaltic, unvented, artificial, fantastic, and founded not so much on science as the vanity of those who profess it.

When put to the test your alienist becomes a mere juggler of terms.

"What is an insane man?" you ask.

"One who has a delusion," replies your alienist and strokes his learned head.

"What is delusion?"

"Hallucination."

"And hallucination?"

"Aberration."

B. & A. FINED AFTER SMOKE NUISANCE CONVICTION

Entering a plea of guilty to an indictment charging it with maintaining a smoke nuisance at the Huntington avenue yards the New York Central & Hudson River Railway Company, lessees of the Boston & Albany Railroad, was fined $75 by Judge Gaskill in the Superior Criminal Court yesterday. The corporation attorney, Michael Maginnis, said:

"The railroad company has made every effort within its power to refrain from allowing this smoke to escape. The building in question is used to house the generating plant which heats the cars in the yards preparatory to their being made up into trains. The work necessitates a very high degree of heat, owing to the size of the yards and the consequent distance of the cars from the heating plant. Although soft coal gives a greater degree of heat, nevertheless, the railroad changed from soft to hard coal.

"Now, Your Honor, this is the first offence, and we have made every possible endeavor to prevent the escape of this smoke. I think you might very justly place this case on file."

"I do not by any means consent to the placing of this case on file," said the District Attorney. "I notified the corporation six months ago that complaints were being made concerning the use of soft coal in the building on Huntington avenue. The black smoke has been escaping since that time. We have inspectors ready to testify to that fact. The railroad has used soft coal knowingly.

"These offences extend over a period of three weeks," said Judge Gaskill, looking at the papers in the case, "and the maximum fine is $100 for each week. I'll make it $75."

Thomas F. Galvin, the florist, who has a conservatory on Boylston street opposite the railroad yards, said to the BOSTON AMERICAN:

GUILD "IMPERTINENT;" MAY BE DISCIPLINED

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Henry Cabot Lodge, senior Senator from Massachusetts, is about as mad with Curtis Guild, Jr., the handsome Governor of that Commonwealth, as one gentleman ever allows himself to be with another. It is all because of Governor Guild's personally conducted petition to Congress, on behalf of free hides and other tariff reforms. "Tinkering," the Stand-patters call it.

There is small reason to doubt that at last something like serious trouble has broken out between Lodge and Guild. If it were not that the gentleman from Nahant is much more interested in the political fortunes of Eben S. Draper than he is in the fortunes of Mr. Guild it is undoubtedly a fact that Boss Lodge would give the high sign on Guild next Fall and run Draper for the Governorship.

Calls it "Interference."

Folks more or less close to Senator Lodge say that ever since news came down of the Guild tariff reform petition the senior Senator has been allowing himself an unwonted use of expletives. He calls the Guild petition an act of "impertinence," and classes the Governor's "coup" as "interference" in affairs that haven't the remotest connection with the duties or office of the Governor of Massachusetts.

Lodge would take Draper out and run him in the coming campaign were it not that he knows Draper would be defeated. Much as the powers are put out with Guild, they are forced to hold Draper until 1908, when they believe there will be more of a chance for him in the larger excitement of a presidential fight.

Draper Shown Unpopular.

The fact that Ross has been saving Draper for next year has been known for some time. Mr. Lodge knows that Mr. Draper needs the excitement of the presidential year.

He is painfully aware of the fact that Mr. Draper has twice demonstrated that he is the most unpopular candidate in Massachusetts—with the possible exception of Mr. Lodge himself.

WHITMAN SCORES GOVERNOR'S MOVE

President William Whitman of the National Association of Woolen Manufacturers, at a banquet of New England manufacturers last night at Hotel Somerset, took Governor Guild to task for his petition for immediate tariff revision.

He scored the Governor for courting the leather and shoe industries while neglecting cotton and wool, and, amid the applause of the 150 other diners, said:

"Recently the Governor of Massachusetts, without consulting, as I understand from good authority, the managers of the great industries in this State, except one that is seeking a special benefit, has undertaken to hasten tariff action and to create a conviction that this is the wish of business men and the voice of Massachusetts.

"He has done so by circulating privately among the members of our Legislature a petition requesting the President and the Congress to hasten tariff action. He has done so in a way to avoid any investigation or discussion.

"We, who are responsible for the employment of thousands of people and for the continued prosperity of many communities, should rise up in our wrath and openly repudiate the Governor's assumed authority and oppose his tariff policy."

Colonel Albert Clarke of the Home Market Club of extremely high protectionists, who was the first to fire a shot at the Governor last week when the latter forestalled a memorial to Congress from the Legislature by substituting his own "petition," sat at Mr. President Whitman's left and led in the applause.

INDORSED BY CLERGY

Ministers of the gospel are not easily deceived and gulled. As a class, they are the most discerning of men, and the last men in the world to be bamboozled by frauds and quacks. They detect imposition and humbug in medical practice quicker than a lynx-eyed bank teller can detect a counterfeit or forgery. And they are truthful. They extol the Osmo-Chemic system because they feel it to be among the most useful and helpful of all humanitarian enterprises. They would no more commend a medical institute conducted by the cunning grafters and polished robbers of the profession than they would commend a red-light gambling house as a business resort. The care and attention that invalids receive at the offices of the Osmo-Chemic system of medicine is as good as the world affords.

ABDOMINAL TUMOR CURED

Mrs. Annie M. Emery, who resides at East Haverhill, Mass., P. O. Box 19, an earnest Christian whose word is accepted by those who know her as beyond dispute, writes the following testimonial of her experience with the modern medical methods of the Osmo-Chemic Physicians: "Seven years ago I was sick. Seven different physicians, among them the examining physician at the Massachusetts General Hospital, diagnosed my trouble as a fibroid tumor of the abdomen. They told me nothing could cure me but a surgical operation. I heard of others suffering as I was who had been cured painlessly and quickly by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians and I had them treat me. After a course of treatment extending over a period of seven months I was cured. That was in July of 1904. Since then not a trace of my former trouble has ever returned and I remain one of the grateful ones who were cured by the Osmo-Chemic Physicians."

Brown's in Town

By Morton Birge.

He comes to-day, the potentate on whom the Boston merchants wait.
He comes. Who comes? Why Brown, V. P., from Newman and the N. Y. C.;
And Boston business men bow down and fearful murmur: "Brown's in town."

He'll hearken to our humble say, our plaints about the B. & A.,
Our wail against the road's abuse, the while we make a meek EXCUSE
To N. Y. C. and V. P. Brown for bringing him to Boston town.

I s'pose we'll be allowed to live so long as we have roads to give To Newman and the N. Y. C., but I should really hate to be
An object of the righteous frown which Brown is bound to bring to town.

I'd rather travel every day upon the darned old B. & A.,
And run the chances then and there of never getting anywhere,
Than risk the awful calling down that we deserve from Mister Brown.

So, please you, Honorable Brown, good, kind and lovely Mister Brown,
Deal gently with the wretched us who stirred up such a petty fuss
But now repent and lowly down before you kneel. Have mercy, Brown!

Vice President of "Public Be ——" Road Comes to Boston on a B. & A. Express — Late!

Vice-President Brown of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company is in conference to-day with Mayor Fitzgerald and the representatives of the leading commercial organizations of this city. The conference is being held in the office of Mr. Van Etten in the South Station.

Vice-President Brown arrived in Boston last night. He even dared to make the journey here from New York over his own New York Central and over the leased Boston & Albany—and he paid for his hardihood, for the Boston & Albany train was late—even with the vice-president aboard it could not arrive on time.

Representative of Newman.

Brown, the New York Central's vice-president, is in Boston as the representative of his chief, President William H. Newman, the man who was too big to come to Boston and whom Boston was unwilling to go to see, although he had said he would be "honored" if that were to take place.

What powers the railroad minister plenipotentiary and ambassador extraordinary brings with him may not be said as yet, for Brown, Vice-President Brown, has not spoken for the public ear.

In the conferences being held to-day the entire situation is to be threshed out first between the vice-presidents and later with the representatives, commercial and municipal, of Boston.

Besides Vice-Presidents Brown and Van Etten, among those present at the conference were the Mayor of Boston and representatives of the Merchants' Association, A. Shuman and Harry W. Cumner, its vice-presidents; Chairman Fitzpatrick of the transportation committee and Secretary Walcott. For the Associated Board of Trade were President Webster, Secretary Boyd and George F. Mead, chairman of the committee on transportation.

Business Associations Represented.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce, the Boston Merchants' Association, the Boston Associated Board of Trade and the Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange all have arranged to have representatives at the conference which may mean so much for the city of Boston. Mayor Fitzgerald, who has taken such a great interest in the matter, of course is to be in the forefront of the talk which is to be held.

That the recently appointed preliminary water front commission, as well as the shipping interests of the different steamship lines which touch here, are to be represented at the conference widens its possible scope and enhances its importance. The representatives of the railroads will find that interests even greater than their own are involved in the troubles and to pass over their complaints of the service of the Boston & Albany will be impossible.

AMERICAN PRIZE TOURIST WEDS

Miss Violet Frances Creber, one of Boston's most popular school teachers, and one of the successful contestants in the BOSTON AMERICAN teachers' contest last Summer, is a February bride, and has dropped the cares of teaching school. She was married yesterday to George Otis Cutter, son of the late W. Bowman Cutter, in the Dorchester Temple Baptist Church, and the happy couple are now on their honeymoon in New York.

The bride has taught in the William Endicott school for several years. The groom is a well-known young business man. Mr. and Mrs. Cutter are to live at No. 30 Walton street, Dorchester.

EXPEL COLORADO SENATOR.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 7.—Found guilty of accepting a bribe, Richard W. Morgan, a Republican, was yesterday expelled from the Colorado Senate by a vote of twenty-nine to one.

JOHN BARRYMORE ILL; OUT OF CAST

Ethel Barrymore is again compelled to disappoint her Boston friends on account of illness. The matinee performance of Ibsen's, "A Doll's House," which was scheduled for this afternoon, has been abandoned because of the illness of John Barrymore, who plays the role of Dr. Rank. Mr. Barrymore is suffering from grippe. As Mr. Barrymore is not in the cast of "Captain Jinks," this play will be given, as usual, for the rest of the engagement here.

The Band Identifies The Genuine

Every El Toro cigar is now banded to guard you against the many unreliable brands of questionable quality which have been pushed on the market since the recent increased cost of Porto Rican leaf. Be sure you get the genuine.

EL TORO

Cigar—5 Cents

This is one cigar you can be sure is Porto Rican, made in Porto Rico, entirely of Porto Rican tobacco. For years its high quality has been a prime factor in popularizing Porto Rican cigars among discriminating smokers.

The El Toro cigars now being marketed are particularly recommended because of the unusual excellence of this year's Porto Rican tobacco crop—from only the choicest selections of which El Toros are made.

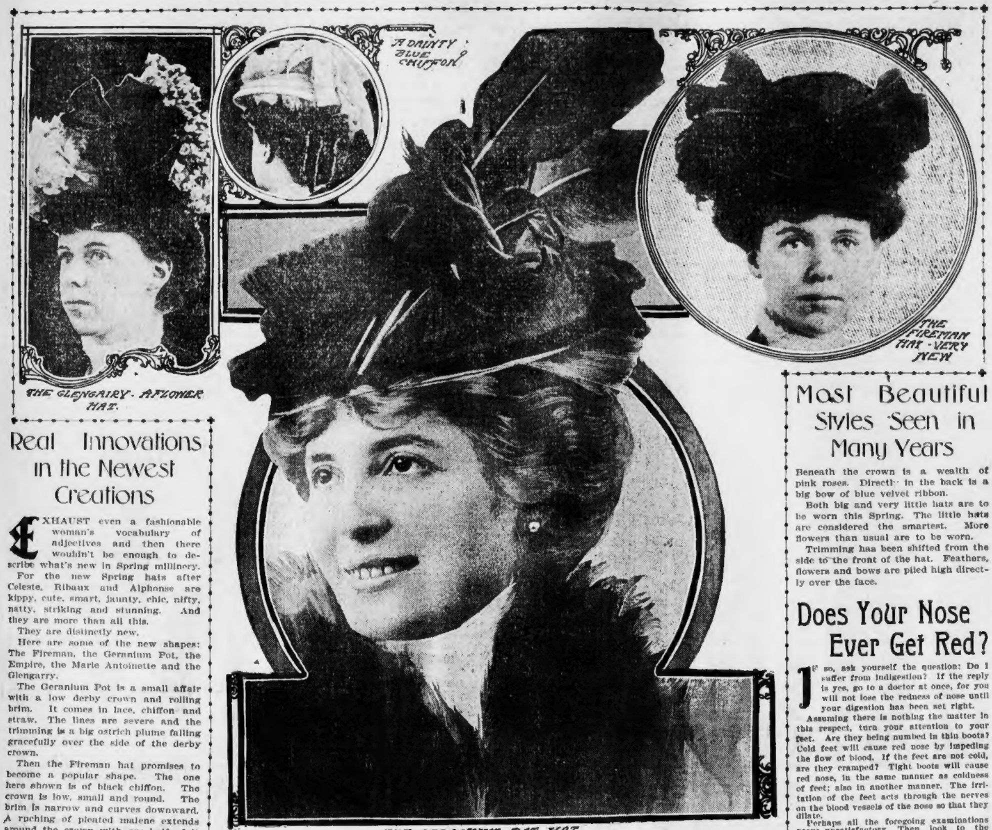
Flower Creation, the "Glengarry," the "Fireman," a Modification of the Pot-Shape, and the "Geranium" Are

FOUR BRAND NEW HATS FOR SPRING



THE GLENGAIRY - A FLOWER HAT.
A DAINTY BLUE CHIFFON
THE FIREMAN HAT - VERY NEW
THE GERANIUM POT HAT.

These models are shown by courtesy of the Henry Siegel Company

FOUR CHARMING NOVELTIES IN SPRING HATS FROM PHOTOGRAPHS ESPECIALLY POSED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN.

Real Innovations in the Newest Creations

EXHAUST even a fashionable woman's vocabulary of adjectives and then there wouldn't be enough to describe what's new in Spring millinery.

For the new Spring hats after Celeste, Ribaux and Alphonse are kippy, cute, smart, jaunty, chic, nifty, natty, striking and stunning. And they are more than all this.

They are distinctly new.

Here are some of the new shapes: The Fireman, the Geranium Pot, the Empire, the Marie Antoinette and the Glengarry.

The Geranium Pot is a small affair with a low derby crown and rolling brim. It comes in lace, chiffon and straw. The lines are severe and the trimming is a big ostrich plume falling gracefully over the side of the derby crown.

Then the Fireman hat promises to become a popular shape. The one here shown is of black chiffon. The crown is low, small and round. The brim is narrow and curves downward. A ruching of pleated malene extends around the crown with one-half of it around the brim. Two big black quills are fastened with twists of black panne velvet on the left side.

An entire flower hat is the Glengarry—a modification of the turban. It is made entirely of small pink roses with a wired shower aigrette of pink rose buds and a rosette bow of green velvet ribbon a little to the left of the front.

This dainty hat is extremely au fait for matinee, afternoon tea and theatre wear.

An Empire hat of pale blue chiffon is striking. In shape it is somewhat like a mushroom. The chiffon is laid on in folds.

About the crown is a ruche of malone.

Most Beautiful Styles Seen in Many Years

Beneath the crown is a wealth of pink roses. Directly in the back is a big bow of blue velvet ribbon.

Both big and very little hats are to be worn this Spring. The little hats are considered the smartest. More flowers than usual are to be worn.

Trimming has been shifted from the side to the front of the hat. Feathers, flowers and bows are piled high directly over the face.

Does Your Nose Ever Get Red?

IF so, ask yourself the question: Do I suffer from indigestion? If the reply is yes, go to a doctor at once, for you will not lose the redness of nose until your digestion has been set right.

Assuming there is nothing the matter in this respect, turn your attention to your feet. Are they being numbed in thin boots? Cold feet will cause red nose by impeding the flow of blood. If the feet are not cold, are they cramped? Tight boots will cause red nose, in the same manner as coldness of feet; also in another manner. The irritation of the feet acts through the nerves on the blood vessels of the nose so that they dilate.

Perhaps all the foregoing examinations prove unsatisfactory. Then look to the waist. Do you lace tightly? Tight-lacing is often responsible for what has been unkindly called the "danger signal."

If you cannot lay the blame to the foregoing, turn your attention to the table. Do you find that flushing follows the consumption of pickles, spices, spirits, wine, etc.? If so, give up the article that offends.

Sometimes, but rarely, red nose is due to a peculiar irritable state of the nerves. Far more frequently it is owing to something quite easy to find and to remedy.

"THE BRACEBRIDGE DIAMONDS, Or The Heart of a Woman"

By Gregory Townsend

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Fugitive's Vow

AFTER all, the necklace was Reginald's. Frank was only holding it in trust for him. Why should he not intrust it to him earlier than the day set by his father?

"If I have these diamonds on my person," Frank mused, "Mueller or his agents are liable to get hold of them at any time in spite of my vigilance. The pieces of the map I can safely conceal by putting them inside the lining of my coat, but diamonds betray their presence as flimsy paper does, not. There seems to be no other way out of it, if I am to watch Mueller successfully."

He brought the engine to a standstill again, looked around to see that Reginald was safely asleep, and then took out the case that held the diamond necklace.

Ripping open the lining of the case with his penknife, he stowed away among its silken folds the diamond which poor Rita had cherished and the one Madame Slavinsky had given him in trust. Then he adjusted and fastened the lining again so that no one could see that it had been disturbed.

The three sections of the map—one for Reginald, one for Reginald's missing child, and one for Vera Slavinsky—he fastened securely within the lining of his coat. He sealed the velvet casket and wrapped it securely in paper, tying the cord around it with many intricate knots.

Then he awoke Reginald.

"Reg," said he, "you think I have treated you decently in all this don't you?"

"I never can repay you," returned Reginald fervently, and thought he meant it.

"It is not a question of repayment, Reginald," said Frank, solemnly. "I do not wish you to do anything for me, but there is something I want you to promise me for yourself."

"Anything, anything, Frank," cried Reginald, impetuously.

"It will take weeks, months, perhaps even years, to prove your innocence," said the elder Bracebridge, "and I shall be in personal danger from Mueller while I am working for you. This package," and he took from his pocket the casket of diamonds, "contains a most valuable heirloom which forms part of the secret of the Bracebridges. If it be lost or stolen it means life or death to you, to me and to your infant son. Will you swear to me to guard this packet with your life, to let no one see it or know of its existence, to restrain your own curiosity and not to open it until I bid you to do so?"

Of course he promised—poor, weak Reginald. He swore by everything he held holy that he would carry out Frank's instructions to the letter.

Sailing Through Space

The airship swept on through space. The moonlight faded, the gray dawn drew her silvery veil over the sleeping fields and villages. Then in the east the first faint flush of dawn appeared above the clouds, changing later into the glorious splendors of the sunrise.

The day wore on. Far below them Frank and Reginald could see the people going to their work, could watch the laborers in the fields, and later see them returning home again tired and dusty.

Everywhere they could see the commotion caused by their appearance. Although Frank purposely kept as high in the air as he could, the airship was seen by the inhabitants of the towns and cities beneath. But the winged ship of the air flew too swiftly for them to be able to determine whether it was a man-made machine or some monster bird of a species unknown.

The second night came on. At midnight Frank roused Reginald who was sleeping.

"We are near our journey's end," he said.

Reginald sniffed the air with its tang of salty breezes.

"Are we near the sea?" he said. "The air smells salty."

"We are nearing Portsmouth, N. H.," said Frank, "if my compasses and maps are right, and I think they are. I am going to circle around the town until I find some deserted spot about three miles distant where I can leave this airship.

"You can readily imagine that I might as well give you back to the New York authorities as to land you anywhere in a city or town. The description of this airship has been telegraphed all over the country by now. But the last part of our journey has been made by night, so I think we have thrown them off the track.

"After we land the airship we must walk into Portsmouth. We shall reach there before daylight, and then I will take you to a sea captain I know. He is under the greatest obligations to me, for I defended him when he was tried for his life for the murder of his wife and acquitted him against great odds. He would do anything for me. I shall not wish to talk with you before him, so I will give you all necessary instructions now.

Plans for Flight

"The captain will make a special voyage to France for me. You must keep to your room all the way and pretend to be ill. When you reach the other side the captain will supply you with money for your immediate necessities. He will give you an address by which you can always communicate with him.

"You must never try to communicate with me direct; always through him. He will always have funds for your needs. He will always be able to get in touch with me if you need me. It is needless to say that you must not use your own name. I would suggest that of Henry Brice.

"I must caution you also, Reginald," he spoke solemnly, "that your whole method of life must change while this terrible suspicion rests upon you. You are hiding for your life and your vindication. You must not attract attention to yourself by extravagant expenditures or reckless living."

Reginald protested again and again that he would obey Frank's wishes to the letter, and although Frank remembered with much misgiving Reginald's escapades of the past, he had no choice but to believe the boy's promises for the future.

He finally landed the airship in a dense grove three miles from Portsmouth. Frank, from his knowledge of the country, knew that with good luck it might remain there several weeks without discovery. He completely covered it with the tarpaulin carried for such emergencies beneath the tiny cabin and then set out with Reginald for the lonely walk to Portsmouth.

They found Captain Briggs, and Frank quickly made the arrangements for the voyage. Then, leaving the boy in the care and the cabin of the old captain, than which there was no safer place in the United States, he made his way to a quiet hotel, registered as William Dirk, and, throwing himself exhausted upon a bed, slept until the sun streamed into his room and awakened him.

Then he arose, paid his bill, went to a store, bought a suitcase and some necessities and took the train for Bangor. There he went to a first-class hotel, boldly registering as Charles Richards of Boston, and called for telegraph blanks.

He knew that Barker's mail and telegrams would be watched, but he and Barker had not conducted some of the most famous criminal cases of the day for nothing, and so the cipher telegrams which he sent out from Bangor were not addressed to Barker, but to a quiet, unassuming little grocer, an old neighbor of Barker, the last man on earth to be suspected of even knowing enough to carry on an intrigue of any kind.

Startling News

Through Barker he learned startling things.

That Schmidt, under the name of Mueller, had bought a few months before a beautiful estate called The Hollow, in Moorcombe, near Cleveland, Ohio. That since he had bought it he had evidently become enamored of Judge Thurston's beautiful daughter, Sylvia.

That he had divided his time for the last few months between Moorcombe and the little apartment beneath the one where Reginald and his young wife lived in New York.

That he had hurried back to Moorcombe the day after Reginald's escape in the airship, evidently letting his admiration for Sylvia Thurston get the upper hand of his secret purpose in New York.

"To Moorcombe I will go," said Frank to himself. Then he kept the wires busy with instructions for Barker.

Barker was to go to Moorcombe and find a secluded farm with an immense barn upon it. He was to buy that farm at any price, and send Hudson down with things to make the house habitable. He was to give out that the man who was to live there was a physician who was making the culture of the germs of various deadly and contagious diseases. This would secure for him the isolation he desired.

Barker also was to set on foot a rigorous investigation of Mueller or Schmidt, and do everything from a legal standpoint to establish Reginald's innocence of the crime of wilful murder with which Barker's advices showed that the coroner's jury had charged the fugitive youth.

Barker carried out his instructions to the letter. Through a trusted agent he bought a farm about three miles from The Hollow. He had the roof of the barn taken off and a huge tarpaulin spread over the top.

When all was in readiness Barker notified Frank, who went to the grove where he had left his airship, launched it and set out for Moorcombe.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The Lost Garden

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THERE was a fair, green garden sloping
From the southeast side of the mountain ledge,
And the earliest tint of the dawn came groping
Down through its paths, from the day's dim edge.
The bluest skies and the reddest roses
Arched and varied its velvet sod;
And the glad birds sang as the soul supposes
The angels sing on the hills of God.

I wandered there when my veins seemed bursting
With life's rare rapture and keen delight;
And yet in my heart was a constant thirsting
For something over the mountain height.
I wanted to stand in the blaze of glory
That turned to crimson the peaks of snow,
And the winds from the west all breathed a story
Of realms and regions I longed to know.

I saw on the garden's south side growing
The brightest blossoms that breathe of June;
I saw in the east how the sun was glowing,
And the gold air shook with a wild bird's tune.
I heard the drip of a silver fountain,
And the pulse of a young laugh throbbed with glee;
But still I looked out over the mountain,
Where unnamed wonders awaited me.

I came at last to the western gateway
That led to the path I longed to climb,
But a shadow fell on my spirit straightway,
For close at my side stood graybeard Time.
I paused, with feet that were fain to linger,
Hard by that garden's golden gate;
But Time spoke, pointing with one stern finger;
"Pass on," he said, "for the day grows late."

And now on the chill, gray cliffs I wander,
The heights recede which I thought to find;
And the light seems dim on the mountain yonder
When I think of the garden I left behind.
Should I stand at last on its summit's splendor,
I know full well it would not repay
For the fair, lost tints of the dawn so tender
That crept up over the edge o' day.

I would go back, but the ways are winding,
If ways there are to that land, in sooth;
For what man succeeds in ever finding
A path to the garden of his lost youth?
But I think sometimes, when the June stars glisten,
That a rose-scent drifts from far away;
And I know, when I lean from the cliffs and listen,
That a young laugh breaks on the air like spray.

By Beatrice Fairfax

THAT beautiful lost garden—how desperately we long to get out of it and how vainly we seek it again!

There is never a little girl who does not long to be as old as her schoolgirl sister. There is never a schoolgirl sister whose mind does not dwell on long trains and parties, and, oh, mystery of mysteries, a sweetheart, and she longs to be the grown-up sister, whose impatient feet are dancing her out of the beautiful garden faster and faster.

And some day the girl has gone, and the woman has come to take her place, and the gates of the garden are closed forever.

Keep your youth and your sweetness and your belief in all things pure and beautiful as long as you can, girls. Do not fret to escape from the garden, for the longing to escape is as nothing compared to the longing to return. While you are in the garden you are at your best; your mind is young and fresh and eager for new impressions.

The older you grow the harder it is to assimilate new ideas. Now is the great opportunity of your life—don't let it slip away from you. Let your eager mind put forth new shoots in every direction.

Remember that a young girl's greatest charms are her purity and freshness. As she grows older she cannot but become disillusioned and world-worn, though there are a few blessed women who retain their youth and sweetness until old age.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox's lovely poem breathes the very spirit of youth, and its impatience to escape from itself.

If youth but knew how age envies it its joyous elasticity, it would go preening itself for sheer conceit.

But, instead it goes hurrying, hurrying along, gladly noting the milestones as they slip behind, not knowing that some day, quite unconsciously, it will race out of the garden of youth into the long, gray stretch of maturity.

So don't be in a hurry, little friends; linger in your lovely garden as long as you may. Crowd much joy and much knowledge into your life; live every minute of it. Don't waste the precious hours in day dreams. Be good and true and prepare for a splendid, useful womanhood. For youth, though beautiful, is fleeting, and beyond its border line lies the chance to lead happy, useful lives.

But you must not waste your time now, for youth is the school for maturity, and every wasted hour will leave its scar.

If you have health and youth, you must be happy, for both are heaven-sent blessings.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

MAY BE HUFFED A LITTLE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am nineteen years of age and am courting a girl one year my junior. I have gone with her several years and hope to make her my wife, as I am earning a fair salary. Lately, however, the appointments that I have made with her passed away wearily. I love her dearly and tell her of the fact, but do not receive any encouragement. Kindly let me know if you think that I stand any chance, and if she thinks well of me and is hiding it, or if she does not love me. H. H.

PERHAPS she is angry at something you may have said or done. If I were you I would get it settled one way or other and put an end to the uncertainty. If she shows decidedly that she does not care for you give her up.

BETTER TELL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a girl nearly seventeen years of age. I am keeping company with a young man one year my senior. I love him very much, but my father objects to him coming to the house and I do not like to meet him on the street. Father does not know I am going with him and I know he would refuse. G. F. M.

YOU are very young, my dear, and it is not wise for you to have friends whom your father disapproves of or does not know. Ask your father if your friend can call at the house. Do not meet him on the street. Men think twice as much of a girl whom they can call on at her own home.

Your Face

As your Face and Hands are the only part of you that is exposed, how important is their care?

Blackheads

No man or woman can be happy with a lot of Pimples, Blackheads and other disagreeable blotches on the face. It makes one sensitive—retards business and social advancement and is a handicap. To people so sorely afflicted a promise of speedy relief and permanent cure is offered by John H. Woodbury Dermatological Institute. Thousands have been cured and made happy. The method is simple, economical, sure, and it costs nothing to find out all about it. Call or write, address Dept. K., 58 Winter St., Boston.

SAYS 3,000,000 TOES OF HUB FOLK NEED 'FIXING'

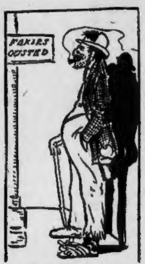
Chiropodist Makes Startling Statement---Advocating Bill to Register Foot Doctors.

Many a pretty Boston girl is now surveying her feet ruefully, wondering if either of hers is included in the half a million or more Greater Boston feet which 'need immediate fixing."

These alarming figures come from an authority none the less than Charles P. Watkins, petitioner for a legislative measure to require chiropodists to be registered.

Mr. Watkins has told the legislative committee on public health that there are 300,000 people in Greater Boston whose feet need attention right away. That is a total of 600,000 feet.

Reducing these feet to the unit of toes gives an aggregate of three million toes.



After Bill Passes.

No wonder Miss Boston is worried about her tootsies.

The chiropodists want themselves registered. They say that there are too many common or garden toe-tinkers in the business. They declare that an unskilled practitioner can, by malpractice of the toes, give the patient results far worse than the original corns, which must be something fearful.

Under the present perilous conditions anyone takes a chance, unless he or she goes to a practiced chiropodist. Even the veriest tramp, who won't allow even the purest spring water to touch his feet, is unable to be sure about his chiropodist.

The revelations of the chiropodists concerning the feet are disheartening to those of us who have thought that the Boston girl was perfection. It seems that even the daintiest shoe may conceal a whole family of corns.

Many an admirer has heard his heart's delight say: "Oh, yes, I wear a number two shoe with perfect comfort. They do say that some girls are foolish enough to cramp their feet in shoes too small for them. But I never would do a thing like that."

Then maybe she displays a bit of her lilliputian foot, looking absurdly small for a real human foot.

But now the swain will have a horrid fear in his heart that this foot may be one of the half-million or so needing "immediate fixing."

Just one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath sweet, and make you feel better all over for it. You can eat all the onions and odorous foods you want, and no one can tell the difference.

Besides, charcoal is the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood,—every particle of poison or impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing,—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified.

CHARGE MAYOR SCHEMES TO BLOCK PROBE

City Hall Hears He is Trying to Tie Up Metropolitan Committee on Finance Inquiry.

That Mayor Fitzgerald is trying with all his cunning to tie up the committee on metropolitan affairs of the Legislature, in its consideration of the bills for the appointment of a commission, to probe the financial conditions and methods of the city of Boston, is the charge that is being made at the State House.

There are members of the committee who have special, pet measures of their own which they are very anxious to have passed. Special bills are sometimes difficult to apss, especially if it is represented by members living in or near the locality affected by the ibils that they are not urgently necessary.

To one member of the Metropolitan Affairs Committee, at least, the Mayor's friends have said:

"You have a bill you want to have passed. Will, be wise. Cut out your support of the Webster bill and the Berry-Vinson bill, or you will find that all the friends of Mayor Fitzgerald will put some crimps into your bill."

Republican Votes Counted.

That the Mayor does not want a commission appointed by the Governor to investigate Boston's finances is still further evidenced by the fact that the Metropolitan Affairs Committee members have been polled, directly and indirectly, as to their attitude on the probing bills which give Governor Guild power of appointment.

The claim is made that enough Republican members have been persuaded that naming of a State commission would be bad politics for their party and dangerous to their own interests to have the report on thebills held off until after the Mayor has had a chance to name his own commission. tI is argued that then the Legislature could be convinced it would be absurd to favor a second commission, and it is this fight for time that the supporters of Mayor Fitzgerald are said to be making.

There will be an executive session on the Webster and Berry-Vinson bills to-morrow, when, it is expcted, Representative Webster will ask that the committee begin the work of making up the report on his bill.

Mayor Asks for Hearing.

To forestall this move, the Mayor has asked Senator Guy Cox, chairman, to fix a date for a hearing on his petition for a bill giving his commission power to summon witnesses and books. With sublime confidence and nerve it is announced at City Hall that the commission makers for the Mayor "may not meet again until March 2."

It is a fact that the business organizations are not warming up to the "walk-into-my-parlor" invitation of the Mayor and are not naming men to serve on the commission, but it is not at all likely that there will eb nothing more doing in the hunt for willing workers for the Mayor's game before that date.

CONTEST WILL OF SUFFRAGIST

HARTFORD, Ct., Feb. 7.—Mrs. Burton Powers of Brookline, Mass., is to contest the will of Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker, sister of Harriet Beecher Stowe and Henry Ward Beecher. The estate is valued at $100,000.

LIEUT. ROSATTO TO TAKE WESTERN TRIP

Lieutenant John B. Rosatto of the Hanover street police station was given a "farewell reception" at the station last night by his fellow-officers and patrolmen. The lieutenant, accompanied by his wife and son, are off this week for a Western trip, where they intend to spend the next four weeks touring the Coast cities. Lieutenant Rosatto has been granted leave of absence of six weeks.

MAYOR GOES UNBIDDEN TO TYPOS' BALL

Oh Yes, His Honor Was There; President's Frown Fails to Jar Him.

AND HE MANAGES TO 'TALK'

It is generally acknowledged to-day that Mayor John F. Fitzgerald will not let anything short of battle or possibly earthquake interfere with his accepting an invitation to a dance where there are voters.

Even the anouncement by President David X. Coughlan of Boston Typographical Union No. 13, that the Mayor had not been invited by the union, as a union, to attend the union ball in Berkeley Hall last night, did not scare His Honor away. He had, as President Coughlan allowed, been asked to come by some employes in the Municipal Printing Plant.

President Coughlan sent out the following letter last night:

"The statement in to-day's papers that Mayor Fitzgerald was to be the guest of honor of Boston Typographical Union at the ball of the book and job printing branch in Berkeley Hall this evening is incorrect. The union has not invited Mayor Fitzgerald to attend. Some members of the committee, working in the Municipal printing plant, invited Mayor Fitzgerald to attend, notwithstanding the fact that Boston Typographical Union unanimously condemned him for his unfair attitude toward organized labor."

Usually the Mayor gets around to a ball early and is induced to help lead off the grand march. Last night he waived that opportunity and did not arrive until after midnight. As a matter of literal fact, the Mayor did not go to the printers' ball last night. He went this morning. So he may be said to have heeded President Coughlan's warning on the one hand and accepted the municipal printers' invitation on the other.

When he came into the hall most of the dancers had gone. The Mayor receiven what one of the printers to-day cautiously described as a "fair reception." He received an invitation to "Say a few words to the boys, Y'r Honor," and di dnot hesitate. The printers learned that they and their cause had the Mayor's hearty sympathy. There was some applause, and His Honor left.

GIRL LED THIEF CHASE TO SAVE EMPLOYERS' MONEY

Miss Fannie H. Rogers Drives Man Who Snatched Bag Into Policeman's Arms.

With only the one thought in her mind of saving her employers' money after it had been stolen from her by a snatch thief, Miss Fannie H. Rogers, brave and pretty and young, gathered up her silken skirts and dashed after the fleeing [illegible] who was racing down Kingston street, with a crowd of half a hundred at his heels, and finally succeeded in effecting his capture in the arms of a big policeman who happened to be standing at the corner of Bedford and Kingston streets, yesterday afternoon.

Hardly able to speak after her long, strenuous run, she begged the policeman to search the man then and there for the pocketbook in which she had placed the money of her employers, and which she had but a few moments before drawn from the Bank of the Republic. There was $162.64 in the bag to pay off the help of the concern. Besides this there was nearly fifteen dollars of her own money in the bag, but she cared not for this, it was the money which was not hers in which she was interested.

Overjoyed When Cash Was Found.

Miss Rogers could hardly wait until the man was taken to the station house and searched. The pocketbook with its contents was found safely in his clothes. She almost danced with joy and many times thanked the policeman who aided her in the capture. She took the purse and went back to the office to which she was bound the money.

Miss Rogers is only twenty-two years old and is one of Dorchester's prettiest girls. She is bookkeeper and cashier for a concern on Otis street, and is in the habit of making daily trips to the Bank of the Republic in Postoffice square. Yesterday was payday, and the amount drawn was a larger sum than usual. The young woman carried a green wrist bag, with a long string which she wound tightly around her wrist. As she neared the doorway of the building close to the corner of Summer and Otis streets the thief stepped up behind, snatched the bag, breaking the string from her wrist. She was stunned for the moment, but quickly recovered and gave chase, which resulted in the thief's capture. At the station house he gave his name as Edward Dillon, twenty years old, living at No. 36 Dwight street.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS.

DON'T LIKE HARVARD'S NEW COACH

The appointment of Louis Pieper of South Boston as coach of the Harvard varsity basebal team is now almost the sole topic of discussion among the student body, by whom it is not favorably received. The first words on the lips of all are: "Who is Pieper? What has he done? We never heard of him." These remarks have been made, not only by the laity, but also by the prominent athletes themselves, who are greatly incensed at the action of the athletic authorities.

At no time a member of the varsity team or even a substitute thereon, Pieper's chief claim to fame rests on the fact that he played on the second team while in college several years ago and last year coached the freshman team.

The students in general and the players in particular do not think that this small amount of experience entitles him to so responsible a position, or that he will be able to fill it satisfactorily. They think the position should have fallen to one of last year's varsity players, as there were at least two good ones who were willing to accept it whose superior ability would have counted greatly in favor of the team.

The new coach is to serve without salary. How the athletic committee can expect, without paying for it, to get the baseball team trained as it should be trained surpasses the understanding of all. Varsity games are no child's play, and the team needs the direction of as capable a man as can be secured to prepare for them. The players realize this, and have from time to time made repeated requests that professionals be allowed to coach the team. Last year this was granted for a few weeks, when Bill Donovan and Willie Keeler were engaged to give the youngsters some lessons. But now even this has been tabooed.

Students and players are very moody over the prospects of turning out a winning team under such conditions, and predict an easy victory for Yale this season.

CLINTON MEN SIGN.

CLINTON, Feb. 7.—William Howe, a southpaw, of some repute, has signed to play with Evansville, Ind., team the coming season.

Jimmy Evans of this town, who last year played with Springfield and Haverhill teams after the close of the Holy Cross College season, expects to be with the St. Paul team in the American Association League the coming Summer.

HARVARD DOWNS ANDOVER WITH IMPROVED FIVE

Playing with a new dash and enthusiasm, the Harvard varsity basketball team swamped the strong Andover team by a score of 33 to 5 at the Hemenway Gymnasium last night.

It was plainly evident that a great improvement has been made by Harvard in the last few days since the defeat administered by Yale. The game was devoid of unusual fouling and the team work and In the first half Allen, Harvard's left goal-throwing approached perfection. forward distinguished himself by three neatly placed goals which he made unassisted. Andover covered her opponents poorly, but Thompson managed to struggle out the only goal Andover made during the game.

Harvard's good team work showed up to advantage in the second half, in which the Crimson ran up twenty points to Andover's one. Amberg was, as usual, the main stay, and was given fine assistance by Broun and Brooks. Three neat goals were made in this half by Harvard, one from the middle of the field by Amberg, one which Burnham ran up unassisted and one by Broun and Brooks, playing in combination.

Judging from the results of this game, Harvard will still make a good showing in the intercollegiate championship race.

The line-up:

HARVARD.	ANDOVER.
Allen, Currie, l. f.	r. g., Thompson
Broun, Downey, r. f.	l. g., Belford
Amberg, Miles, c.	c., Haines
Burnham, l. g.	l. f., Blumenauer
Brooks, r. g.	l. f., Richmond

Score—Harvard, 33; Andover, 5. Goals from field—Amberg, 6; Brooks, 4; Burnham; Allen, 3; Broun; Thompson. Goals from fouls—Broun; Blumenauer, 3. Referee—W. N. Knox of Everett. Time—20-minute halves.

MURPHY PUTS BROCK TO SLEEP

Special to the Boston American.

MONTREAL, Feb. 7.—Tommy Murphy knocked out Johnny Brock of Cleveland at the Shamrock Club here last night in the seventh round of what was to have been a fifteen round bout. For the first five rounds it was a fast and even fight. In the sixth round Brock weakened and was knocked down three times. He remained on the floor for the count of nine each time, but was able to stay to the end of the round. He put up a game fight, and was knocked down six or seven times by Murphy before he was finally put out.

SAYERS SHOWS UP WELL.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Feb. 7.—Willie Fitzgerald of Philadelphia met with a surprise last night when he faced Maurice Sayers of Milwaukee before Dan Walker's Colorado A. C. Fitzgerald expected to put Sayers away in three rounds, but failed to do so and was put on the defensive from the third to the sixth round.

FAST DORCHESTER GAME.

A basketball clash is slated to-night at the Dorchester High School gym when the East Boston C. L. A. team faces the Dorchester Alumni five. Ahern of the visiting team is six feet six inches tall, the tallest man playing the game, and he will be the centre of attraction.

PUTNAM WON ROLLOFF.

In the weekly rolloff at the Old Colony alleys Putnam won, with a score of 287. Roche was second, with 281, and Foster third, with 273.

JOHN L. TALKS OF JEFFRIES

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BY TAD.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—"In my prime I honestly believe I could have beaten Jeffries in ten rounds on the turf with London prize ring rules," said John L. Sullivan last night in his apartments. The ex-champion is visiting New York with his show after an absence of three years, but is still a close observer of fights and fighting men.

"Almost every day I meet people who ask me about Jeffries, and I always say that he is a great man," continued the big fellow, with a toss of his head. "He is a great man. Any man who is a champion I think must be a great man. In my mind, however, I think Jeff would be too big for a successful fighter on the turf. His weight would be a great handicap, and you know he never was a terrific hitter.

Twenty Years Ago.

"I could swap rights with any man in the world twenty years ago and never hear the birds sing. I beat them in exchanging. I battled toe and toe, until the tide turned one way or the other, and then if my man did not fail to avoid punishment I usually flattened him with my fist. Jeff is bigger than I was. he weighs more than I did, but then I fought men just as big as Jeff and in that time just as hard.

"Look here," said Sullivan, taking a pencil and paper, "Jeff goes twenty rounds with Ruhlin and does not have his man down for the count once. Jim Corbett, lighter and weaker, goes twenty-three rounds, hitting Jeff three to one, and is only knocked down by what you would call a lucky punch. Tom Sharkey fought Jeff altogether forty-five rounds and never took the count. Sharkey was more of my build than any of the others, but I figure that I was a harder hitter than Tom. If he could go forty-five rounds, why couldn't I? And then fighting London rules would be a bigger handicap for a man as big as Jeff. The longer these big fellows go the worse it is for them, and I'd set him a merry pace.

"How would I fight him? Well, right here I'll tell you that it would be a body fight with me from start to finish. I think Jeff's weak spot is his stomach, and I'll tell you why. You take any of those fellows who use that crouching position, and nine out of ten have weak stomachs. They use the crouch to save the body, and it is a great help. Most all of the men Jeff fought tried for the head. He is too strong there to bother. He has a heavy jaw and a thick neck, and they can withstand a heavy shock. His body is the same as any other man's. You belt them on the body, and maybe five or six rounds after the effect begins to tell on them.

Body Blows Count.

"A man punched on the jaw can recover without any bad effect, but once you belt him in the body he loses strength, confidence and speed. I figure that, being shorter than Jeff, I could battle him close and wear him down with my punches to the stomach and short ribs. I don't think I would fear his punch. He only knocked Fitz out clean, and all the other men he fought were worn out. They stopped most of his battles, so that you see he is not a quick finisher.

"I wish I was a young fellow again just to show the public that the men of to-day are not as tough as the oldtimers. They have every comfort to-day, whereas we old fellows were out in the rain and mud, fighting and wrestling, and the weather alone most of the time was enough to make you stop.

"Yes, Jeff will be champion as long as he can keep in shape, I think."

BASKET TEAM SUSPENDED.

The registration committee of the N. E. A. A. U. announce the suspension of the Worcester Y. M. C. A. basketball team for competing against the Lakeside A. C., a professional team, on Monday evening, February 4, 1907.

Big Interest in Bout at Valley Falls.

MELLODY LIKED IN HUB

Honey Mellody is not letting the strong stories emanating from New York about Willie Lewis and his wonderful condition disturb him in his training at Northboro, for the champion is going about his work with the same precision which has marked all his battles where he has figured his opponent of any importance.

Mellody has learned a lot in the ring, and the most important lesson was to overlook the attempts of his antagonist to work up some scheme to scare him. Joe Walcott tried it and found that Mellody had it on him, being a fighter with more brains, who was a few points better at the game of worrying the other fellow.

The hardest thing a fighter finds to do at the present time of the year is to reduce his weight on account of the cold weather. Mellody, who is a strong, husky young giant, has to have warm quarters to even get up a perspiration after boxing even for half an hour, but his shrewd manager, Johnny Mooney, picked out the proper place for Honey to train and get right.

There will be plenty of Hub money behind Mellody if the New Yorkers have anything to offer on Lewis, and they won't find any trouble in placing the same when the boys get in the ring at Valley Falls next Monday night.

HUB SPORTS ON SPECIAL TRAIN TO SEE FIGHT

So great is the interest in the Mellody-Lewis bout to be held at Valley Falls, Rhode Island, next Monday night that a special train will carry the local sports to the battle ground.

The train will leave the South Terminal station next Monday night at 7 p. m. promptly and will run express to Valley Falls, arriving there at 8 p. m. The show will open at 8:15, and if every bout should go the full distance the show will be over at 10:15 o'clock.

The special train will return to Boston immediately after the show, and those who make the trip will positively arrive in Boston before midnight.

Information regarding tickets can be secured from Miah Murray, 1,156 Washington street, and Billy Pierce, 28 School street.

Mellody and Lewis are both rounding into shape and one of the best contests of the year should result.

Lewis's showing against Joe Gans at Madison Square Garden, New York, May 18 last year, was the best that any man has made against the Baltimore wonder in some years. Lewis was credited with having the best of the bout, and would undoubtedly have received the decision had there been one at the end of the tenth round.

Everyone who sat at the ringside at Chelsea when these boys met concedes the evident fact that defeat came to Lewis more from his own carelessness than from Mellody's skill. That bout was one of the very best held at Chelsea, and a repetition of the same should be well worth the trip to Valley Falls.

P. Jawn O'Brien Says There's Surely Millions in Wild and Wooly Mining Schemes

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—P. Jawn O'Brien has "came and went."

Philadelphia Jack has been floating around the mining camps of Nevada for the past month or so and he returned to Los Angeles brimming over with schemes for the making of millions.

VERY SIMPLE REALLY CYANIDE
SPENCER

"I've a Little Machine."

Jack has leased a 160-room hotel on Van Ness avenue in San Francisco and he owns a half interest in a dry washer and concentrator, which, according to P. Jack, will revolutionize the mining industry and make the name of Hagan even more celebrated than the O'Brien of the past.

"Well, how about the fighting business in Nevada?"

"Fine! Fine! Say, did you ever see a cyanide plant?"

"No, where does it grow?"

"Oh, nothing like it! Nothing like it! Cyanide is a—er—er—an acid, that's what it is and they use it to make the quartz give up the gold. The gold sticks to it, you know. If you reduce Tom Sharkey to an acid you would have cyanide. Well this cyanide costs money and I've got a little machine that will put the cyanide joints on the bum. Got two men down in the Virginia Dale district looking for placer prospects and when we find them, there will be something doing. People have been looking for a dry concentrator for years and we have found it and when we get to going along right, we will have all these gold camps coming to see us.

"Now about that hotel: I grabbed a ten-year lease on this hotel on Van Ness avenue and I will act as the proprietor. You have no idea how hard it is to get a room in San Francisco. People cannot get the accommodations no matter what they pay, so I have——"

"Oh, you want to know about the fight game in Nevada? Well, I spent a week or so in Ely, I was the guest of Tex Rickard in Goldfield, I talked to M. M. Riley of Tonopah, and I must say that I am as much in the dark as to what they are going to do as any man who has not been up there. They talk money without much trouble in Nevada, but they didn't put any of it where I could get hold of it. I do not know what the outcome of Riley's big boxing carnival will be, and nobody else seems to know.

"Tex Rickard is scheming on pulling off something big about the Fourth of July, and he wants it to be a heavyweight fight. In fact, he would like to take the Burns-O'Brien contest off McCarey's hands, paying the same price for it. This is not possible, for that fight will come off in Los Angeles, and this time I can promise to step into the ring ready to do my very best. It is just probable that I may get a preliminary fight here—probably with the winner of this Flynn-Sullivan thing.

VERY SATISFACTORY INDEED
SPENCER

Jack Has Leased a Hotel.

"If this dry washer thing comes through as I expect, I will not mind about fighting any more. Of course, I want to beat Burns here in May. I will never stop thinking that I was not able to do justice to myself in that encounter and the next time my left arm will be all right and there will be a different story to tell.

"I am dickering with Gunner Moir. I may go across the pond to fight him, but as my time is very valuable just at present, I would rather he came over here. I am sure we could get as much money to fight in this country. I have a couple of offers in the East which I have been considering, but I will allow nothing to interfere with the Burns fight in May."

And then the lights went out. Jawn said he was going East for a rest.

BASEBALL NOTES.

Who is the best man to lead off and who the cleaner-up? are questions managers are considering just now.

Kid Gleason and Roy Thomas are jolly seadogs. They are the only Phillies who will risk the trip to Savannah by the sea. The Kid was always addicted to the water route.

Coaching is an art not to be despised. It requires the brainiest men on a team to be the best coachers. The Latham imitators have all been dismal failures. Nick Altrock is, perhaps, nearest to the original Arlie.

Chick Fraser has bought him a house in Chicago. Chick must imagine that he is anchored at last.

Ned Hanlon's team of youngsters will attract the attention of fandom, anyhow, for what they won't do. But Cincinnati doesn't expect as much as usual, which is a mighty good thing. However, we wish the kids well.

With no outlaw league to use as a sandbag, these ball players who are holding out for more money are in the "squeeze play" that failed.

Charley Murphy claims to have cleaned up $148,000 last year. McGraw struck the wrong time to make an offer of $10,000 for Evers.

An anti-Sunday baseball bill was killed in Kansas recently. Almost any old legislator is in favor of having baseball played on the day when he has the best chance to use his pass. Particularly in these dry times.

Pitcher Bob Ewing says he will not go to the Hub. There was no danger of Dovey planking down $7,500 for Bob, anyhow. So Hermann is nothing out.

Catcher Kling still sticks to his statement of more money or nothing doing. It is either the continuation of an old argument or Kling has been greatly encouraged by past success.

Joe Cantillon is credited with having traded a pitcher for a bulldog. Judging from some of the pitchers Joe has had, it must have been a poor dog.

ELEVEN TEAMS BATTLE IN THE SIX-DAY RACE

THIRD DAY'S STANDING.

	Miles.	Laps.

White-Guiol	148
McArdle-Hamilton	147	2
Acheson-Hagerty	145	3
Rollins-Russell	145
Sparks-Phillips	139	1

Setting a terrific pace the six-day roller racers at the Park Square Rink finished up the third night of speeding while the thousands of fans cheered wildly as the long distance pluggers made the final spurt at the closing of the third night.

Never before in the Hub has there been such an attraction in a six-day race, which fascinates the sport-loving public. To watch the race one night is to continue, and its a daily visit for the regulars each night, as something always happens in changing the relative standing of the eleven teams now left to finish out the race when it comes on Saturday. It would not be surprising if possibly one or two teams fell by the wayside before the final night as the gruelling is wearing and only the strongest can stand it.

It is a marvelous pace the racers cut out each night, covering fifty miles in the two hours, with the bunch being constantly called upon to meet the spurts of the leaders who try time and again to gain a lap and set the spectators on edge as they tear around the resined floor at express speed.

WHO WILL WIN?

There is all kinds of guessing which team will be the final winner of the big end of the purse, as the accidents are liable to happen to the top combinations and not till the final dash for the tape Saturday night will the result be known.

The heavy strain on the racing men is beginning to tell. With the week only half gone, they still maintain the high rate of speed, never lessening for fear that any lost ground cannot be made up, and its not a race where any weaklings can take a chance.

Two hours' racing each night is full of intense excitement every bit of the way. As the men whirl around the big track they watch one another in cae o fa "jump" which someone always has on tap.

WEST IS LEFT OUT IN A. A. A. RACING BOARD

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The idea of centralization of power in small committees, as advocated by President Hotchkiss of the A. A. A., is evidently carried out by Chairman Jefferson Demont Thompson of the racing board. This latter gentleman has selected as his conferes on the racing board Messrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., E. Russell Thomas, Dave Hennen Morris, A. R. Pardington, Frank G. Webb, A. G. Batchelder and S. M. Butler, all of New York; R. Lincoln Lippitt, Providence, and George L. Weiss, Cleveland.

The only two members of the board who hail not from New York are Messrs. Lippitt of Providence and Weiss of Cleveland. It would seem rather appropriate to have given the far West some representation on the committee.

Mr. Thompson is the first chairman of the board to be reappointed to that position, and his activity in connection with the Long Island Speedway is unquestionably partially responsible for this honor, although to be sure he was at the head of the commission which handled the affairs of the recent Vanderbilt.

Mr. Vanderbilt has an international reputation in racing affairs, and is now in Europe, where he will advise with the officials of the French, Italian, German and British clubs regarding their attitude toward the 1907 Vanderbilt Cup race. Mr. Pardington was chairman of the first A. A. A. Racing Board, and was of great assistance to the Racing Board of which he was not a member, during the past two years.

One of the features of the Chicago automobile show is the display of the Thomas Flyer that holds the world's non-stop record of 21 days 3 hours and 29 minutes—made during a run from Philadelphia that began on January 2 to New York, thence across the country through Troy, Albany, Utica, Buffalo, Cleveland, South Bend to Chicago.

The engine of this wonderful stock touring car was watched by observers every minute of the time, and did not hesitate or stop until in a blizzard near Utica, N. Y. It stopped for forty seconds—enough to end the run officially—and after recranking the engine ran until the car got into Cleveland.

C. W. Kelsey, president of the Maxwell-Briscoe Boston Co., and the man who won the Deming trophy in the recent Glidden tour, was in Boston for a few hours yesterday. He made a flying trip, leaving by the noon train. It is understood that Kelsey will within a few days make public an interesting fact.

VENEZUELA IN 'DANGER OF NEW REVOLUTION

CARACAS, Venezuela, Feb. 7.—A revolution in Venezuela is momentarily threatened. Failure on the part of the government authorities to convince the people that President Castro is really recovering from his long illness has given great impetus to the movement started by his enemies to wrest the presidency from him.

Preparations to meet any emergency have been made by Castro's friends. On Monday a trainload of soldiers with fifty carts of cartridges was dispatched to Alcatara, one of the centres of dissension.

General Gomez, Vice-President, who is anxious to succeed Castro, is kept under close watch at his residence and prevented from communication with his friends.

Just how serious the government regards the situation is shown by the issuing of a decree forbidding masking during the carnival here, lest trouble be started by disguised persons.

The Japanese "Crisis"

Is It Real? Is It Manufactured? One Attitude Only for America in Either Case

Through men that usually talk for him President Roosevelt has announced to the people his belief in the probability of war with Japan—under certain contingencies.

The statements issued semi-officially at Washington have been extremely explicit, calculated to alarm the timid and to impress others that know war's meaning—whether it end in victory or defeat.

It is a very serious thing to talk of war lightly, a very wicked thing to use threat of war as a means of coercing national or sectional feeling.

This newspaper speaks for millions of American homes, for the young men that must fight, for the mothers whose anxiety is worse than any wound on the field of battle.

We feel bound to speak frankly and to express our belief that Mr. Roosevelt—perhaps without appreciating the seriousness of his action—has MISLED the people as to the actual facts.

We think it probable that Japan's alleged desire to war against this country, AND THUS TO END HER OWN PROMISING CAREER AS A NATION, is the invention of political expediency at Washington, and NOT the expression of Japanese folly or ego-mania.

We do not believe that Japan has presumed to dictate the internal policy of this nation, to dictate elimination of States' rights, threatening war as an alternative.

We believe that Mr. Roosevelt's advisers, realizing the political consequences of his attempt to coerce California, have persuaded him to hold up the bogy of war to distract attention from his own unjustifiable assumption of power.

Mr. Roosevelt's friends have discovered that this country does not want AND WILL NOT HAVE any influx of Oriental labor, blood or customs. Mr. Roosevelt's advisers have discovered that his attitude toward the California school question has lost the Pacific Coast to his party as matters stand now.

If the President, in violation of States' rights, undertakes to dictate to California what she shall do, he is politically a weaker man. But if Mr. Roosevelt can say and make the people BELIEVE that he has interfered to avoid a long and costly war, then he may hope to be regarded as a protector of the people, thus redeeming a hasty and presumptuous message.

That, IN OUR OPINION, explains this recent war scare.

But, ASSUME that the President talks with absolute frankness. ASSUME that Japan, pining for war with this country, has said: "Regulate school matters in the States to suit ME. Disregard States' rights at MY dictation. Be guided in the management of America's internal affairs by MY WILL, or I will fight and destroy you."

What then?

Is this country to submit? Should the President say to California: "You HAVE rights. But Japan has ordered me under threats to disregard your rights, to deprive you of them by force. And as I, representing this country, FEAR JAPAN, I OBEY JAPAN."

Is that the answer of America or the American President?

It may be the President's answer, but it is not the answer of the American people.

This country WANTS no war. It SEEKS no war. But it is NOT another China. OUR CITIZENS will settle OUR SCHOOL MATTERS. Japan's citizens or statesmen will NEVER settle those or any other internal American affairs. They will not settle them with war or WITHOUT WAR, not BEFORE war or AFTER war.

There are eighty millions of Americans in our country to-day. When we numbered only EIGHT MILLIONS our President enunciated the Monroe Doctrine which bears his name.

At that time, only EIGHT MILLIONS OF US, we informed the whole of Europe that we proposed to control and protect THIS ENTIRE CONTINENT, NORTH AND SOUTH.

There are seventy-two millions MORE of us now. ARE WE UNABLE TO MANAGE THE AFFAIRS OF THE SCHOOLS OF CALIFORNIA WITHOUT JAPAN'S PERMISSION OR ASSISTANCE? Have we deteriorated so much? Does the shadowy threat from across the Pacific shake us so?

If, as we believe, Japan desires to continue her development and her friendly relations with this country, recognizing our rights as we recognize hers, Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers have done a disingenuous and unworthy act in threatening war to coerce proper American sentiment.

But if Japan DOES MAKE THREATS that means that SHE WANTS WAR. It means that she wishes to use the perfected fighting machine which alone represents her great national debt. It means that success has indeed made her blind. We shall not meet that Japanese frame of mind adequately by any supine submission. If Japan wants war, she will have it, and the meanest of speculators thinking only of his pocket could not invent any apologies humble enough to stave off the war.

The grown man who boasts when brutal fighting is in question is unworthy of the age in which we live. But there is involved in this Japanese question no matter of national bragging or national pride.

We MUST CONTINUE TO EXIST AS A SELF-GOVERNING NATION. We must continue to regulate our own affairs.

Worse than the loudest braggart would be the citizen suggesting submission as an alternative to war, when not alone national autonomy is at stake, but RACIAL autonomy as well.

We do not believe that Japan contemplates or wants war. We do not believe that the intelligent people of the East want to compete with us, except in intellect, industry, honesty and civilized proofs of ability.

But, WHATEVER Japan may feel or plan, this we can say to the Japanese, to Mr. Roosevelt and to all that talk of dictating to individual States or to American sentiment under pressure of foreign threats:

This country hopes never to see another war.

But this country could name no better day than TO-DAY for beginning a war with any country or any combination of countries, if the alternative of such a war were submissive yielding to a dictation from without that would mean an end to the rule of THIS nation by the CITIZENS of this nation.

How One Corporation Distributes Prosperity

EDITOR BOSTON AMERICAN:

I have been much interested in your little editorials on the lighting monopoly in this city. I present for the consideration of your readers a table of figures that gives an illuminating example of the manner in which public service corporations distribute prosperity.

Rate of dividend nud and president's salary paid by the Edison company from 1898 to 1905:

Year.	Rate of dividend. Per cent.	President's Salary.
1898	7½	$10,000
1899	8	12,000
1900	8	15,000
1901	11	20,000
1902	10	25,000
1903	10	30,000
1904	10	30,000
1905	10	30,000

Increase in the rate of dividend, 38 per cent.

Increase in salary paid to president of Edison company, 200 per cent.

Increase in wages of small wage-earners of the Edison company, little, if any.

Increase in the cost of living, 30 per cent. to 40 per cent.

A consideration of these figures would seem to indicate that there is something the matter with our much-vaunted national prosperity. When coming under the jurisdiction of public-service corporations it seems to travel so fast that it only hits the high places.

They would seem to indicate that our modern captains of industry take but little thought of the rank and file, so long as they secure for themselves a satisfactory amount of prosperity.

One feels inclined to ask why the humbler, though no less faithful employes, should not share equally in the company's prosperity with the stockholders and high salaried officials.

I would respectfully suggest to the commanders of that industrial regiment, the Edison Company, that the rank and file could assimilate a thirty per cent. increase in wages without a serious shock to their nervous systems, and could put every dollar of it to good use.

I would suggest that they emulate the example of a good military commander, whose first consideration is the welfare and comfort of his men, thereby winning a respect and loyalty that become in time "more precious than rubies or fine gold."

Government for the Peopl

By Rabbi Fleischer

IF Democracy were an accomplishe fact, we would at least have government for the people.

As it is, we need to practice that eternal vigilance which is not only the price of liberty but also the one means of attaining and retaining even the minimum of self-government.

I am not ambitious to join the Grand Army of those whom President Roosevelt has picturesquely called "muck-rakers."

But I do believe in facing the facts.

And among those facts in our public life are two unpleasant ones to which I think it well to call attention.

First of all our "public servants" soon after election lose their representative character. "Clothed with a little brief authority" (as Shakespeare puts it), they assume a masterful and patronizing attitude towards the public and our needs and desires.

So easily does the democrat become the autocrat.

You need give this no more serious test than by attending a public hearing before one of our legislative committees. Note the legislator's air of confident authority, or at best, one of tolerant attention to the individual pleader.

He seems to have forgotten that, before the last election, he was one of us and that, after another election, he will again be one of the helpless "common people."

But, for a short spell, he is turned benevolent despot, apparently forgetful that whatever authority may be in him is "broad-based upon the people's will."

The other unpleasant fact which prompts these lines is the apparent ease with which legislation can be commanded to protect and further particular private interests and the corresponding difficulty with which legislation for the public welfare is accomplished.

One might think—and certainly we ought to be able to take for granted—that our chosen representatives would be our absolutely sure reliance for protection of the public interests. And perhaps they are. Some certainly are. But I am pleased to note that the Independence League of Massachusetts has assumed the responsibility of safeguarding public welfare by "maintaining at the State House during all sessions of the Legislature expert legal counsel, who shall look after the interests of the people, as the interests of the corporations are now watched by the paid representatives of the corporations."

This is as it should be and constitutes a genuine public service, fo proverbially, everybody's business nobody's, and is more likely to b neglected.

Prominent among the members o this "People's Lobby" is Professo Frank S. Parsons. His presence mean not only incorruptible integrity, but fairly religious zeal for the public good and an untiring devotion made in valuable by the immense wealth of hi knowledge about corporations an their relation to the public.

If the unselfish service of th "People's Lobby" secures the sympathetic support of the general public we shall, in form and in fact, gain a increasing measure of government for the people.

Then we shall score a point for triumphant democracy.

MR. E. Z. MARK TRIES THE GOAT

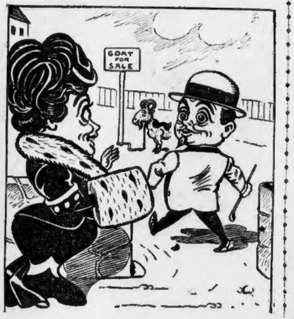
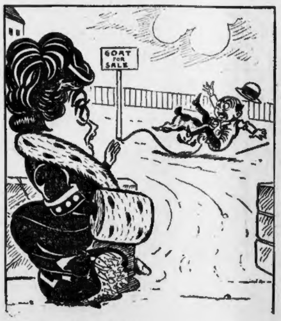
1. MRS. DIMPLE (a neighbor)—Oh, Mr. Mark, just see that billygoat. I am awfully afraid of goats. Oh, don't tell ME. I'll wager YOU are afraid of goats, too. Not for one moment would you dare go up anywhere near that goat.



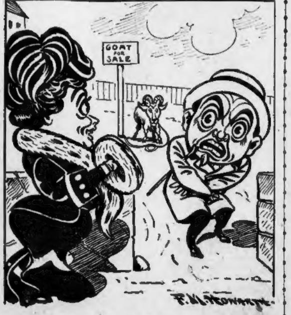
2. MR. E. Z.—Who? ME? Why, Mrs. Dimple, I have no more fear of goats than I have of humming birds. Now, just watch me; I'll go right up and pat that goat on the head.

MRS. DIMPLE—Oh, how brave!



3. MR. E. Z.—W-O-O-O-F!

MRS. DIMPLE—Oh, the wicked animal. Poor Mr. Mark!



4. MRS. DIMPLE—O, Mr. Mark, I thank you very much. That man wanted to sell me that goat for my little Willie; he said he was kind and gentle. Now, that you have so kindly proven for me that he is decidedly vicious, I shall not buy him. Thank you, Mr. Mark.

"A statesman is a politician in a glass case," set Mike.

"Vot is der difference between Liberty und Freedom?" set Rudolph.
